

...up bags triumphantly, as if the bread had transformed from boring and basic into a trophy to behold.

"I'm going to take a picture of my bread. Everyone put their breads together," squealed one teen, before snapping a photo with her cell phone.

Adults such as Heidi Fatica watched with her husband from her front porch as the Orlando Baking crew passed without throwing her a bag. How dare they? She ran down the street after the truck.

"I got one," she said later, after snagging a bag from a grinning Orlando tosser. She said she just had to have some for sandwiches. "I've got cheese and everything, but no bread."

Fatica said the buzz about bread was only natural for Little Italy.

"You're not Italian," she said. "If you were, bread would be everything."

To reach this Plain Dealer reporter:
paodonnell@plaind.com, 216-999-4818

LAW & ORDER

CLEVELAND

Free legal help for parents

Legal Aid's volunteer lawyers program is hosting free advice clinics for parents who need help advocating for their children in school. The Saturday education law clinic runs 9:45 a.m. to noon at Legal Aid's office at 1223 West Sixth Street. The organization is also holding free clinics on Saturday, Oct. 24, at 9:45 a.m. at the Fatima Family Center, 6600 Lexington Ave.; and Saturday, Nov. 14, at 9:45 a.m. at St. Martin de Porres Family Center, 1264 East 123rd St. Legal Aid handles civil problems. Bring important paperwork with you to the clinics. For more information, visit www.lasclev.org or call 216-687-1900.

HAPPENING

CLEVELAND

Blue Line shuts down

The Blue Line rapid will be out of service from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and Sunday so the Greater Cleveland Regional Transit Authority can work on the tracks. Buses will operate from Shaker Square to the end of the line at Van Aken-Warrensville in Shaker Heights. Buses will stop at every rail station. Customers should allow extra travel time.